"IN HIS STEPS."

Salt Lake City, Jan. 8, 1901.

Editor Deseret Evening News:

Would you be kind enough to answer the following question through the columns of your popular paper?Since the days of Christ up to the present, has there a people lived who have been "followers" of Him? If not, will a time come when mankind will love one another and walk in "His steps," unless they live the command given the rich man, not give, but "sell all they have," whether they be rich or poor, one to another?Respectfully, one in the cause of humanity.

J. H. MIDGLEY.

In reply to the foregoing you will say, there have been many persons who have endeavored to live according to the precepts of the Savior of the world.
Probably there has never been a time since His crucifixion when there were no such followers of the Christ. That they have not carried out His teachings to perfection will be conceded. They form a standard which even the very best of human beings would have a mighty struggle to reach. Some of those precepts would be impossible to fully practice, except by a concert of action among a community. Individuals would go down under the weight of opposition that would overwhelm them.Yea, there will come a time when all mankind will be brethren and practice the golden rule. This will be a gradual advance. The influence of the example and doctrines of the Divine Nazarene has been felt in the world to a wonderful extent, and is manifest today in all civilized nations, though not in sufficient power to bring about the consummation foreseen by all the inspired men of the ages past.Just as sure as the Son of God came into the world and accomplished His mission on earth, so sure will the kingdom of this world become His kingdom, and He will reign and rule in the hearts of men and over all peoples and dominions and powers. Peace will universally prevail, all enmity depart, and fraternity will make all interests common.But our correspondent seems to fall into a frequent error in regard to special teachings of the Savior, which are often interpreted in a general sense.
The advice to the young man about selling all he had, etc., was for him, not for everybody. If he had taken it joyfully, instead of turning away sorrow-fully, he would have been numbered among those close disciples of Jesus, who followed Him in His ministry and went where He sent them as His ambassadors. Everybody is not called to that work. Commands given to such chosen instruments as the Apostles, are not always applicable to others.If all Christians are to sell all they have who are to be the buyers? If they were to merely give it to one another, how long would the proceeds last and what kind of a community would there be in a short time? The general spirit of Christ's teachings is that of brotherhood and love, kindness and compassion, aid to the needy and relief for the afflicted. But they also comprehend the duty of citizenship, the struggle for mortal existence, the labors of life, the relationship of men and women to each other and the common affairs of peoples and nations. They are adapted to humanity as it is, with all its weaknesses and needs and do not attempt impossibilities.There are hosts of people today who are striving, according to the light they have, to be led by the spirit of the Savior. Their efforts will not be in vain.
The good there is in all nations and in all the creeds will live, while the errors will die. And the love for God and His children of every race and condition which Christ taught and exemplified, will in due time permeate the souls of all living beings, and we shall in very deed be the sons of God and brothers all.

INTOLERANCE IN BOSTON.

Reviewers of the past century have recently glorified our age for the progress of religious tolerance. They have pointed out that in every land that lays claim to civilization, toleration has accorded to people of different beliefs equal rights and protection.While it is true that legislation has, as a rule tended in a liberal direction, it is also true that popular sentiment has not always followed in the paths made by legislators. Not even in this country, that should be at the head and front in matters of religious and political toleration, has the principle of freedom to worship according to the dictates of conscience been perfectly mastered everywhere.An instance illustrating this fact is related by a Boston paper. An Episcopal clergyman of that city said last Sunday, in his sermon, that in his opinion the Trinity church had been desecrated, because its rector had permitted it to be used for the funeral services of the late ex-Governor Wolcott, on which occasion a Unitarian clergyman had been permitted to read the prayers.The preacher did not hesitate to say that the Episcopal church had been greatly demoralized by this act. This protest is all the more notable becausemade at the time when "Christian" churches, at the suggestion of the leaders of the Evangelical Alliance, are engaging in prayer, all over the world, for the union of all believers in the Savior. This clergyman, who thinks his church desecrated because a prayer is read, not fashioned in accordance with the Episcopal pattern, is a fair sample of the progress of religious toleration among a large class of people, even in this most enlightened of all countries.Some of our Elders going from place to place with their testimony of the Gospel, wonder at the bigotry that often denies them the privilege of using church buildings in which to hold services. But it is evident that a good many clergymen still live in the days of Cromwell, when to be a heretic was to be worthy of death at the stake.
They are survivors of the past ages, no doubt as honest in their convictions, as are the so-called Covenanters who refuse to fulfill any duties of citizenship, as long as the Constitution grants liberty to the Roman Catholics. They are honest, but dangerous in a country like this, and their actions suggest that there is still much to do in this country, as elsewhere, in the interest of toleration and liberty.

RAILROAD STATISTICS.

The fourteenth annual report of the Interstate Commerce commission, submitted to Congress on the 4th of this month, shows that the gross earnings of the railroads operated for the year ending June 30 last, amounted to $1,486,673,954, or $7.76 per mile. Of these earnings $369,860,760 were classed as passenger earnings and $1,048,268,- 875 as freight earnings. The gross earnings shown in the final report for the preceding year were $1,313,610,113.
Operating expenses for the last fiscal year aggregated $956,814,142, or $5.925 per mile of line. The net earnings of the roads embraced in this advance report were $523,858,912 for 1900, or $74,- 110.74 more than they were for 1899.
Income from investments and other sources amounting to $60,675,790 were received, so that the total income was $584,534,702. The amount of dividends declared was $109,400,147, which is said to be about twenty-seven and a half millions in excess of the dividends during the previous year.The total force employed by the roads for the year was 928,924 persons, and of these 2,210 were killed and 24,- 923 injured, which shows, by the way, that the accidents and fatalities of the railroad traffic during one year are about equal to those of a small war.
The commission recommends that a system of public supervision should be maintained and a close inspection made of the rolling stock in service, so that no wear or breakage may go unnoticed and unremedied. It is not proposed that such public inspection shall in any respect interfere with the duties of the operating companies respecting repairs. Such inspection would require some expenditure of money, but in view of the large dividends paid to stockholders, the railroad companies should not feel an expenditure for the purpose suggested too much of a financial burden.The sum of $15,000 was appropriated by Congress at its last session, to enable the commission to exercise to some extent such supervision, and the report says this has proved highly salutary, for in every case communications sent to the railroad companies concerning the equipment of the roads, have been favorably acted upon and many improvements have been effected. The system of inspection should therefore be maintained and rendered still more effective.It is claimed that railroad accidents have been greatly reduced during the last couple of years, and there is no reason why they should not be still more reduced. One of the most fruitful sources of mishaps on the roads is said to be the neglect of keeping the automatic couplers in proper repair, and such neglects are certainly not unavoidable.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

A contributor to the Medical Record, Dr. R. Hertzberg, writing from Stanford, Conn., offers an explanation of the self-limitation of infectious diseases, by which is meant, we presume, that they so often run their course, after which the patients recover. His reasoning is both plausible and interesting.He starts with the proposition that, given a certain area of ground which furnishes a limited number of persons fresh air, pure water, drainage and food, we have a healthy community.
But let ten, twenty or a hundred times as many people crowd together in the same area. The air becomes vitiated, the water contaminated, and the soil polluted. The consequence is that disease appears, and unless the conditions are remedied, life will become extinct.This holds good, he argues in plant life as well as in animal life. And he concludes that the law governing micro-organisms is the same. Hence, as long as the bacilli producing contagious diseases have ample room in which to live and breed, the disease will go on, but when this room is limited, it will soon be overcrowded, and the bacilli themselves will become sick and die.Pneumonia, the doctor says, is a disease which illustrates this. After infection has taken place we have the incubation period, lasting a variable length of time, during which period the microbes of Fraenkel are multiplying and producing their toxins and antitoxins.
Suddenly the patient has a chill. That means that the system is becoming surcharged with the toxins. An inflammatory reaction now sets in which endeavors to limit and localize the infection, by consolidation. If this is successful the organisms are hemmed in, and reproduction continues; crowding and its consequences result, and the death of the disease germs is soon manifested by the crisis. If the hemming in is not successfully performed, new areas are constantly invaded, the crisis does not appear, the patient becomes surcharged with the toxins from the constant absorption, and death soon ends the scene.The same process, we are told, takes place in typhoid fever, only much more slowly. The conclusion is that the law holds good in all infectious diseases.
The toxins and decomposition productsof the germs soon kill these, whenever they are hemmed in within a limited area, just as higher animal life perishes under similar conditions.Without any comment on this theory, it is evident that there are many things to learn about the world of micro-organisms revealed to science in the last few years. And if it were possible to study their structure and habits, as those of higher plants and animals are made the objects of observation, we fancy that very few diseases would exist, and none would really be dreaded.
The battle against bacilli would be as easy as that against rattlesnakes, or tigers. It would be as easy to discern between the good and bad, as it is to do so between useful plants and animals, and their opposites.Probably not till such knowledge shall have been more accurate and more general than it is today, will mankind be free from many of the nasty superstitions in the treatment of diseases, that have been handed down to us from the age of alchemy, astrology and quack-ery.

TO DO GOOD PAYS.

Victor H. Olmstead in the Bulletin of the Department of Labor, calls attention to the workings of the "welfare institutions" that have been tried by employers of labor, in the hope that the experiments may find a more general application.One institution commenced by organizing excursions for the employees, arranging meetings and concerts, and conducting ethical classes, where social patriotic questions were discussed. Then they went on to organize insurance funds, instituted vacations and shortened the working-day. And all this was found to be a paying investment. The result was "better work, better men, and better citizens." The improvement gave returns in dollars and cents.
Nearly all who have engaged in this kind of practical philanthropy have found that money expended in establishing social, educational and recrea-tive clubs, gymnasiums, libraries, and lecture courses, industrial, manual-training, and cooking schools and in general in providing for the health of employees, and for their entertainment and instruction during hours of leisure, has been more than returned in good will and increased efficiency.Special attention is called to the work done by the Cash Register company of Dayton, O. This company has a cottage for its employees, containing a library and a room for clubs, kindergarten, and other classes. There are bathrooms, a dining room and a reading room. The company also asks for suggestions from the working men, paying cash prizes for a new idea that is found practical. Of the result of these measures, one of the officers of the company has this to say:"First, the creation of an esprit de corps among the employees, and the improvement of their morals as well as that of their families and all the neighborhood; second, they result in more intelligent labor, and enable the company to command a higher class of people; third, having a better class of people, the company secures better work and more of it, the employees being rendered more efficient and capable of performing much more and better work than formerly; fourth, they have created an atmosphere of good-fellowship and warm family interest among employees and their families, and have removed the barriers that ordinarily exist between employer and employee; fifth, the character of the workmen has been elevated, and throughout the entire city a love of better homes and a desire to do better work has been brought about; sixth, other employers have been led to see the value of these methods and to adopt them in their dealings with their employees. The principle upon which the whole system of the company is based is simply the showing of a daily personal interest in their employees' comfort and welfare."When attention was first called to the necessity of bettering the condition of the working classes, the experiments tried were generally denounced as impracticable and visionary. But the revolution has been brought about gradually. The principle itself has been recognized as correct, and this much has been gained for it. How to apply it is the problem of the future. But there can be no doubt that in another hundred years, the condition of the laboring classes will be as much more improved, as they have been from the time Robert Owen first commenced his work for the betterment of those dependent on the enterprising managers of the New Lanark Mills in Scotland.

ARMY SURGEONS.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 7, 1901.
Editor Deseret News:Dear Sir—Will you please inform me what the term as to pay and the conditions as to appointment, of a contract surgeon in the U. S. Army, and oblige. A SUBSCRIBER.The pay of army surgeons is $120 to $125 per month. Applications for appointment and for other particulars in relation to the matter may be made to the Surgeon General of the United States Army, Washington, D. C.The army reorganization bill may be called a heroic measure."Hold-ups on Boston Common are getting to be quite common.""O" represents the sphere of letters better than any other member of the alphabet.The longer the powers at Peking negotiate the further the Chinese question seems to be from settlement.When a smallpox patient breaks a policeman's jaw he may be said to have the disease in a virulent form.Where the tramp and the potato come together there will the memory of ex-Gov. Pingree ever be held sacred.To be truly successful every Shakespearean revival should be accompanied by a revival of great Shakespearean actors.It is estimated that the callers at the White House average nine hundred daily. While all are not distinguished citizens it must be admitted that their average is high.The Humane Society proposes to prosecute all those who are cruel to their beasts. This is right and proper and will have the support of all goodcitizens. A merciful man is merciful to his beast."Is the Senate the treaty making power?" asks the Boston Transcript.
So long as treaties have to be ratified it is. But what a question for a Boston man!In 1900 it cost $40.71 to educate a child in the public schools of Greater New York. This was in excess of any previous year but still nearly three dollars under the estimate. It seems excessively high, and is very much higher than the cost in our own city. And we venture to say that the instruction imparted to the children was in no way better than that given in the public schools of Salt Lake City.Last year was a most remarkable one in the history of British commerce.
The foreign trade amounted to the enormous sum of £875,000,000, while the excess of imports and exports over any previous year were respectively £38,- 000,000 and £27,000,000. This great increase in Britain's trade was due to industry and enterprise and not to the triumph of any political party.It is rumored that President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California is to leave that institution and succeed President Eliot at Harvard, who will soon retire from the head of that institution because of his advanced age. This will be a great tribute to California's zeal for higher education. Once before she furnished to one of the country's greatest universities—Johns Hopkins—a president, Daniel C. Gilman, who has made it most successful and who has given it a world-wide fame. Berkeley's loss will in every respect be Harvard's gain.Recently a professor in a distinguished western university resigned. It is said his resignation was the result of his too free criticisms of the financial ways of the founder of the institution.
This brought forth more or less adverse comment on American institutions of learning from European papers and professors. Now, it transpires, five professors of Helsingfors university, Finland, are about to be removed for criticizing the government.
Then our European critics forget the famous case of the seven professors of Göttingen in the early part of the last century.

THE WEST POINT HAZING.

New York Evening Post.

The hazing at West Point and Annapolis is but a survival of practices once customary at civilian colleges throughout the country. In these the rough and public hazing did much to create a proper spirit among the undergraduates and to end the evil practices, if the West Point graduates are so much scattered to the four points of the compass and so hindered by military discipline as to render it very difficult to impose their views upon the students of the academy, the emergency and the public shame call for extraordinary efforts.

Chicago Record.

It is gratifying to note that Col. A. L.
Mills, soldier and scholar, promoted from a captaincy to command the academy for conspicuous bravery. San Juan hill, is of a different opinion. From the beginning of his authority he has opposed hazing with all his influence, and has reduced it to a minimum by appeals to the true standards of honor, pride and courage. He believes in the courage of the man who will stand up to fight till he has cause; who makes a distinction between the bravery of the bully and that of the courageous soldier who saves his blows for his country's enemies. The evil conditions now coming into public almost entirely ante-date the administration of Col. Mills.

Boston Herald.

It may be that the results of the congressional investigation must be waited for before something really practical in the nature of a remedy is suggested.
The Springfield Republican is of opinion that the difficulty lies in the methods of governing the academy, the governors and faculty keeping aloof from the cadets, who are immediately governed, controlled and disciplined in their first years by upper class men, to whom they are committed as subordinates.
The organic system has not been much investigated by this committee, perhaps because they are entirely familiar with it.
This is a feature to which the congressional committee may properly give special attention. If the system is responsible for the continuance of hazing, in spite of the opposition of the governors of the academy it may become necessary to reform the system.

Kansas City Star.

The friends of Cadet Booz attribute his evident unpopularity in the academy to his belief at West Point his past and the Sunday school workers with whom he was associated gave him a Bible. This was reported in the newspapers and it is alleged that the cadets respected his belief for the right time.
His friends produce his letters to his pastor, saying: "I try to read my Bible every day, but it is hard, terribly hard, to be a Christian here. There is a Young Men's Christian association here, but its members are as bad as any of the others."

New York Mail and Express.

It is useless in the face of such occurrences as have already been related to talk of the desirability of a "little" hazing to take the freshness out of newly arrived cadets. No set of young men has ever been found at any institution who could be trusted to see that the process stopped at the right time. It has inevitably developed into brutality wherever tried. If conclusive evidence of the serious ill-treatment of Cadet Booz has not yet been brought out by the board of inquiry, it is already evident that West Point's reputation has been besmirched in a way to injure the standing of that institution for years to come. The American public is not likely to tolerate such practices in an institution it pays for.

Baltimore Sun.

Are we reverting to barbarism? Is college life, with its hazing, cane rushes, football, etc., relapsing to the crude and coarse type of former times? The brutality of undergraduates might be attributed to the larger liberty allowed them nowadays, in comparison with the times when they were herded in dormitories and closely watched, but for the fact that they present themselves also at West Point and Annapolis, where the atmosphere is under military control.
Possibly there is a connection between these cruelties and the new jingo spirit which has been developing all over the Christian world during the last few decades. In the North American Review for December Frederic Harrison inquires "the general debasement of tone" the world over to the success of Bismarck's policy of force. For the first time in this century Bismarck, he says, "made our national sympathies and ideals his own, and he was a man of a different cast." He thinks, since the era of "the man of blood and iron."

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

The International Monthly for January opens with an able article by Emil Reich on "England at the Close of the XIX Century." He gives a comparative study of the status of Britain's interests, military and diplomatic. Bernard Bosquet, of London, writes on "The English People." Prof. Gellie, of Edinburgh, the great geologist, describes "Mountain Structure and Its Origin." Dr.
P. H. Williams, of Boston, writes on "The X-Rays in Medicine," and Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, on "The Public Library in the United States."— Burlington, Vt.Harper's Bazar for Jan. 5, appears with a most attractive cover design, while its contents, as always, are among the best of its class. "Fashions for Brides," is its opening article, and the frontispiece is a "Paris Bridal Gown," drawn by Ethel Rose.—Harper & Bros., Franklin Square, New York.A carefully prepared facsimile of "The New England Primer" has been published by Ginn & Co., New York.
Of this "Primer" it is said that it was in its time one of the greatest books ever published. The reproduction in facsimile of an old edition is interesting chiefly for the sake of comparison between the school books of a hundred years ago and today.—Ginn & Co., New York.
